

TODD GROVER

Todd is a native of Anchorage, Alaska, a Mecca for nordic skiing in the United States. Todd competed in regional and national-level nordic events as a junior racer and, later, as an undergraduate at Dartmouth College. His older brother Chris – who went on to coach for the U.S. Ski Team – can trace his career to those early days of peeling Todd off the couch to go train.

Todd is a 1998 graduate of Northwestern School of Law of Lewis & Clark College in Portland, Oregon. After law school, Todd was proud to serve as a public defender in Portland. In 2004, Todd and his wife, Ellen, moved to Bend, where Todd opened his own law practice. Today, Todd and his partners continue to defend those accused of crimes in Oregon's state and federal courts. Todd remains active in the community. He is a proud member of the Boneyard Cycling Team in Bend and, at least a few times each year, sullies the family name by competing in local skiing, biking, and running events. His two boys, Evan and Peter, train with the Mt. Bachelor Ski Education Foundation and compete in regional and national events as proud members of the Pacific Northwest Ski Division.
